Republic of Croatia

During the second half of 2012, Patton Boggs advised the Republic of Croatia regarding certain legal issues of significant international importance that arose out of the April 15, 2011 decision of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia ("ICTY") in the "Operation Storm" case, IT-06-90, including military standards and regulations, and customary military law. On behalf of our client, we brought to the attention of officials in the Department of Defense, as well as members of the U.S. Congress and their staffs, the dangerous legal precedents that would be created if the ICTY Appeals Chamber upheld the April 2011 decision. In particular, we highlighted the April 2011 Decision's creation of a standard whereby artillery shells that fell more than 200 meters from a legitimate military target would be considered illegal artillery shelling.
